Subject: Our Meeting Yesterday to Discuss Havana Docks and the Behn Family Claims

Dear Mr. McCready,

Ambassador Rocha and I enjoyed our meeting with you yesterday and appreciated your time as well as our candid discussion about the US Certified Claims. We look forward to continuing this process and hope that the NDA will be found acceptable. If you have any questions regarding its content please call the Clarinbridge LLC counsel, Scott Jablonski, at (305) 781-2366. He would be happy to discuss the document with you.

I have appended an email sent to me by the Chief Counsel of the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission (FCSC) that addresses some of the issues raised yesterday, particularly the US Justice Department's view that the confiscated US assets became owned by the Cuban state after nationalization. As discussed, we consider it highly unlikely that any Cuban government would return expropriated assets, and it is far more likely (as Mr. Bradley mentions) that a blanket, lump-sum settlement would be negotiated by the two governments to the detriment of claims owners. The FCSC publicly admits (per their website) that there are no funds available to pay to the US Treasury for settlement. Based on what transpired in past claims programs, I believe that the US Government would consider compensation bonds as "funds" for this purpose.

With best personal regards,

Tim Ashby

Subject: Cuban Claims Program

Dear Mr. Bradley,

I have several questions on the Cuban Claims Program:

1) Did certified claimants relinquish their rights to the confiscated assets when they submitted their claims to the Claims Commission?

ANSWER: No, they presumably could still opt for return of their property in the future, if Cuban law permitted. However, the U.S. and Cuban governments could agree to a blanket, lump-sum claims settlement, in which case all U.S. claimants would be limited to whatever financial compensation was made available to them out of the claims fund paid into the U.S. Treasury by the Cuban government. But whatever the scenario, claimants did not have any ownership rights to "relinquish" after the Cuban government nationalized their property; the property became owned by the Cuban state upon nationalization.

2) Did any US corporate entities or individuals negotiate settlements with the Cuban government, or receive any compensation?

ANSWER: We are unaware of any such cases.
